Girl and the Gloat!

Everyone knows Stephanie Izard's Girl & The Goat is the table to score right now. And aesthetes are as interested in the design details as they are the piled-high plates of hiramasa crudo. Creator of the rustic-chic interiors, Karen Herold (VP and design director of the firm 555) dishes up her insider secrets—as well as plenty of steal-able ideas for your own den of style. —Lisa Skolnik

Top Shelf

Ornate Victorian wrought iron fireplace grates Herold found at Chicago's Jan's

Antiques were cleaned, sealed and stacked ceiling-high to become a storage system behind the bar.

Light Bright

Raw copper pipes bought at a hardware store were fitted with salvaged vintage jar lights (Mason jars can also work) for lights that look every bit chic as industrial.

Style Tiles

Herold found these Mexican tiles online and used them to clad the stairway risers to the lower level, and inset them in the wood floor to become a "carpet" that demarcates a private dining area.
